

Eisenhower Global Scholars Program

IE is an international University based in Madrid, Spain that educates professionals in international relations, business administration, law, technology and social sciences. Recognized as a leading educational institution in Europe, IE University delivers several Master's degrees included in the top 10 rankings in the world including the Financial Times, The Economist, Forbes and QS amongst others. The University is supported by 31 international offices worldwide, including three in the United States, New York, Miami and Los Angeles.

IE School of Global and Public Affairs and the Eisenhower Foundation have joined together to offer two (2) talented US citizens, between 20 to 30 years old, a full scholarship to study the Master in International Relations. In addition to covering the full tuition fees, the Eisenhower Foundation will provide the beneficiaries with a monthly living allowance, health insurance, funding to pay for visa processing and a return international airfare.

WHO IS THE SCHOLARSHIP FOR?

IE and the Eisenhower Foundation will offer recent graduates and young professionals with US citizenship the opportunity to learn in a diverse and multicultural environment addressing the global challenges facing today's society.

Candidates should be diverse, dynamic doers who have demonstrated commitment to public service or fostering entrepreneurship. We are looking for change agents interested in lifelong engagement with an influential network of global leaders.

ABOUT THE PROGRAM

Master in International Relations

The Master in International Relations has been carefully curated to respond to the needs of the international labor market, and to align exactly with candidates' motivations.

The program achieves this by providing the skills students need to forge a successful career within an experiential learning journey that's academically outstanding, hands-on, immersive and customizable. As well as fundamental management and analytical skills, the Master in International Relations builds around geopolitics and diplomacy; international economics and business; and global governance and international cooperation.
